——— Natura ſublimis & acer,
Nam ſpirat Tragicum ſatis; & fœliciter audet.

IN Dramatic Poetry in general, I think I may venture to ſay, the Engliſh have equall'd, if not excell'd, any Nation whatever. I ſhall ſpeak chiefly of Tragedy, it being the moſt ſolid and ſubſtantial Part of Writing; where our Thoughts are carried up ſometimes to ſuch an Height, that we ſee into the very Heavens, and are again let into the Secrets of the infernal Regions, and enjoy the Talk of the greateſt Kings and Heroes: Where we are ſeduc'd, with a Kind of diverting Sorrow, into Tears, elevated into ſublime and lofty Thoughts, and begin to fret and rave, though with all the Satisfaction imaginable; of this Sort we have in our Tongue, ſeveral that are incomparable. In Mr. Dryden's All for Love, there is ſomething throughout the Whole, ſo grand, ſo tranſporting, and majeſtick, that it may claim the Title of one of our nobleſt Tragedies, and therewithal, ſo uniform, and within ſo juſt Dimenſions of Time, that the ſevereſt Rules are ſtrictly, nay, kept even to a Wonder. If we conſider thoroughly ſome fine Expreſſions that appear through the Whole, we ſhall be loſt in admiring the Beauty of them. When Ventidius weeps, the very Words of Anthony will almoſt force our Diſpoſition beyond our Will,

By Heav'n! he weeps; poor, good, old Man, he weeps.

I might dwell for Hours on this Subject; but Time forces me to ſpeak of others, though I muſt ſay, (to ſee ſo noble a General ruin'd by a Woman's Beauty)

——— On my Soul, 'tis mournful,
Wond'rous mournful!

Mr. Otway's Venice Preſerv'd can never be admir'd too much; but the many Obſervations that could be made on it, will be too tedious to inſert here, and therefore we muſt omit it to another Opportunity; but by the Way obſerve, that Mr. Otway had an univerſal Genius, and incomparable Parts, to work up a Plot ſo grand and noble, with ſuch inimitable Exquiſiteneſs.

Lee had a ſublime Genius for Tragedy, which ſhines particularly throughout his Rival Queens, inſomuch that it ought not to be paſs'd by in the World, without being taken more Notice on. Old Clytus is repreſented in the whole Drama, as a good old ſturdy Soldier, quite alienated from Effeminateneſs, a Lover of his King, and a ſevere Enemy to Flattery; Alexander himſelf ſays of him, ſpeaking how ready he was to execute his Commands,

——— At my Command,
I've ſeen him run ſwifter than ſtarting Hinds.
The tender Graſs ne'er bent beneath his Feet,
Swifter than Shadows ſleeting o'er the Fields;
Nay, ev'n the Winds, with all their Stock of Wings,
Have puff'd behind, as wanting Breath to reach him.

I cannot ſay, I think running well is any good Accompliſhment to a Soldier, when we commonly upbraid Cowards with their Swiftneſs; however, it was at his General's Command to go againſt the Enemy, and the Speech is good and poetical. What we may next admire is the tormanting Temper of the two Queens, who both complain of the Falſehood of Alexander in the moſt natural and lively Terms imaginable:

Roxana then enjoys my perjur'd Love:
Roxana claſps my Monarch in her Arms:
Doats on my Conqu'ror, my dear Lord, my King,
Devours his Lips, eats him with hungry Kiſſes:
She graſps him all, ſhe, the curſt happy ſhe.
By Heav'n! I cannot bear it, 'tis too much:
I'll die or rid me of the burning Torture.
I will have Remedy, I will, I will,
Or go diſtracted; Madneſs may throw off
The mighty Load, and drown the flaming Paſſion.

The Grandeur of Alexander in his Words, and in ſhort, the Whole is carried on with a wonderful majeſtick Stateline's; the Villains ſpeak with a grand Prophaneſs, peculiar and proper to ſuch curſ'd Deſigns; witneſs the laſt Speech of Caſſander.

——— On Saturn's Field,
Methinks I ſee the frighted Deities
Ramming more Bolts in their big-belly'd Cannons,
And firing all the Heavens to drown his Noiſe.
Now we ſhould laugh; —— But go diſperſe yourſelves,
While each Soul here that fills his noble Veſſel,
Swells with the Murder, works with Ruin o'er,
And from the dreadful Deed this Glory draws,
We kill'd the greateſt Man that ever was.

But as every one has his Imperfections as well as Beauties, Mr. Lee likewiſe has his. In Sophoniſba, or Hannibal's Overthrow, which is greatly admir'd by ſome, but by moſt Men of ſound Judgments he is tax'd for the aukward Uſage of Scipio, and Hannibal; particularly by Lord Rocheſter, in one of his looſe Satires:

When Lee makes temperate Scipio fret and rave,
And Hannibal a whining amorous Slave,
I laugh, and with the hot-brain'd ſullian Fool
In Bayes's Hands, to be well laſh'd at School.

I can't but think he had much amended it, if he had made Hannibal ſpeak as rough as Bajazet in Tamerlane; notwithſtanding there are ſome fine Lines in it. I chuſe the firſt Speech for an Example:

Conqueſts with Laurels has our Arms adorn'd,
And Rome in Tears of Blood our Anger mourn'd.
Like Gods we paſs'd the rugged Alpine Hills,
Melted our Way, and drove our hiſſing Wheels
Through cloudy Deluges, eternal Rills;
What after Ages ſhall with Pain believe,
Through burning Quarries did our Paſſage cleave;
Hurl'd dreadful Fire, and Vinegar infus'd,
Whoſe horrid Force the Nerves of Flint unlöos'd;
Made Nature ſtart to ſee us root up Rocks,
And open all the Adamantine Locks;
Shake off her miſſy Bars, o'er Mountains go
Through Globes of Ice, and Flakes of ſolid Snow.

I've been ſhort on theſe Subjects, becauſe when a fit Occaſion ſhall ſerve, I intend to proceed farther.

N. B. If Mr. C—— knows from whence theſe Remarks are taken, let him publiſh it in the next Hyp-Doctor.

News from Parnaſſus.

THE Muſes are moſt of them out of Order; as ſome Packets mention the Death of Pegaſus in very obſcure Terms, as follows:

Muſe. All Wit is fled! —— How fled?
M. Why poor old Pegaſus is dead.

Another Packet brought us the following Epigrams.

An Epigram of Martial tranſlated by H. Rodney, Eſq;

SICK of a raging Fever Aulus lies,
And fills the Houſe with lamentable Cries.
He turns his raging Sides oppreſs'd with Pain,
And groans and ſighs for Eaſe, but ſighs and groans in vain.
And why? —— The Velvet bluſhing as the Morn,
Circling around his Body does adorn;
Diamonds and Rubies ſparkle on his Breaſt,
And Luxury itſelf explains the reſt.
Vain Man! not all that plenteous Egypt boaſts,
Nor what's tranſferr'd from rich Arabia's Coaſts;
No Dreſſes a-la-mode of Pomp and State,
Can ought thy fiery Fever's Flame abate.
Would you your priſtin State of Health regain,
And once being Poſſeſſor, it retain;
This gaudy Pomp and Furniture forbear,
And take ſuch homely Cloathing as I wear.

Another Epigram, tranſlated by H. R——y.

ACON, poor Youth, of his right Eye's bereft,
His Mother, Leonil, has loſt her left;
But both ſo handſome, both are fram'd ſo well,
That both, in Beauty, e'en the Gods excel.
Give her, dear Boy, the Eye that's left to thee,
So, you'll blind Cupid, ſhe'll a Venus be.

The unlucky Ape.

AN Ape once ſeeing a Shoe maker very intent in cutting out Leather, and the Shoe-maker leaving the Shop, the Ape found an Opportunity to get into the ſame, and cut the remaining Leather in the Shop all into ſmall Scraps and Pieces, and that with great Application and Induſtry, ſo long till the Shoe-maker returned, not a little provok'd at the Damage he receiv'd from the Ape; whereupon putting his Brain to work in what Manner to be reveng'd upon the pernicious Creature, and obſerving, that the ſame watch'd all his Motions with great Attention, he took the Clipping Knife, and feigned two or three Strokes upon his Throat, laid the ſame down, and immediately retired while the Motion was ſtill in the Ape's Remembrance; no ſooner had the Shoe maker turn'd his Back, and left him to range in the Shop, but the Creature ſeizes upon the Inſtrument, and trying to mimick the Shoe-maker, unfortunately cut his Throat from Ear to Ear, which rid the Shoe-maker of a miſchievous Clipper of his Leather.

An Ape cauſes a Law-Suit.

George Philip Harſdorffer mentions in his curious and learned hiſtorical Relations, Part 1. Hiſt. 81. c. 7. p. 294. an odd Law-Suit on Account of an Ape, in the following Words. An Italian wrote from Genoa to his Correſpondent for 1, 0, 2 Apes; the Middle, 0, was to denote, or that is to ſay, one or two Apes; the Factor took the Order for 102 Apes, but was not able to procure that Number all at once, but ſent only 53 at one Time, the Company whereof was not all acceptable to the Italian, who remanded the ſame, proteſting that the Commiſſion he gave him was only for 1 or 2 of thoſe Animals. The Factor replies thereupon, that the Order he ſent him could not be otherwiſe underſtood nor interpreted than for 102, it not being cuſtomary to put a Letter of an uncertain Signification between two Cyphers, and that he would make good his Allegation at Law, if he is longer refus'd his Commiſſion for the 53 Apes, Expences and Freight. The Italian perſiſts in his Refuſal, and alledges that no other Interpretation could be admitted in this Caſe, than that his Order was only for 1 or 2, it not being agreeable to good and ſound Reaſon, that ſuch a Swarm of miſchievous Animals ſhould be deſired by one Man; and why not the even Number of 100, rather than 102? adding, that that Number would have been ten Times too much, if a Deſign had been formed to procreate the Race of thoſe Animals throughout Italy, when the Circumſtances of the Letter, wherein one or two of thoſe Creatures had been deſir'd, might have eaſily (if well conſider'd) diverted him from procuring ſo vaſt a Number, whereas he in a Country where they are not ſcarce, and can eaſily be got, was not able to procure more than half the Number of them, a Number ſufficient to ſtock the Nurſeries of foreign wild Beaſts of the principal Courts of Europe: But all theſe Pros and Cons, on the one and the other Side, availed nothing to ſettle the Number; and both Parties commenc'd a Law-Suit, which tho' 'tis ſaid to have laſted long, yet not in what Manner to have been determined.

[Price THREE HALF-PENCE.]

SATURDAY, December 9.

LAST Night a poor Man, unknown, walk'd about Billingsgate, very melancholy, he was tolerably well dreſs'd, and obſerv'd by ſome of the Neighbours, who offer'd him Charity, which he thank'd them for, but refuſed, and reply'd, his Buſineſs was done; he laid himſelf down at Somers's Quay and expired.

This Day a curious fine Monument was ſet up in Weſtminſter-Abbey, in Memory of the Right Hon. James late Earl of Stanhope.

But a Letter from Seville, forwarded by an Expreſs, ſays, they have received Advice from Oran, of the Garriſon's having made ſucceſsful Sallies on the Moors, in one of which their Governor, the Marquiſs of Santa Cruz, was unfortunately kill'd.

On the QUEEN's Grotto. By STEPHEN DUCK.

NOW bluſh, Calypſo; 'tis but juſt to yield,
That all your moſſy Caves are here excel'd.
See how the Walls in humble Form advance
With careleſs Pride, and ſimple Elegance;
See Art and Nature ſtrive with equal Grace,
And Fancy charm'd with what ſhe can't ſurpaſs.
Flow ſwiftly, Thames, and flowing ſtill proclaim
This Building's Beauty, and the Builder's Fame;
Tell Indian Seas thy Naiads here have ſeen
The ſweeteſt Grotto, and the wiſeſt QUEEN,
Whoſe royal Preſence bleſt this humble Seat;
How ſmall the Manſion, and the GUEST how Great!
So ANGELS ſat in Canaan's ſweet Abodes;
So rural Shades were honour'd by the GODS:
Here may her Soul th' Almighty's Wonders trace,
Far as the Worthies that adorn the Place;
Whoſe awful Buſts around the Grot appear,
The brighteſt Stars in Learning's Hemiſphere;
Their Fathers dimly view'd the dawning Ray;
Theſe roſe like Suns, and brought a Flood of Day.
But ceaſe, my Muſe, and caſt thy wand'ring Eyes
Where Phœbus' lofty Domes * majeſtick riſe;
Whoſe tuneful Strains have ſung the Grotto's Praiſe;
Contending each, till each deſerves the Bays.
O pardon me, ye learned Sons of Fame,
Who faintly after you attempt the Theme;
Nor think I rival your poetick Fires,
My QUEEN commands, and Gratitude inſpires:
And you, imperial FOUNDRESS, deign to ſmile,
Nor ſcorn the leaſt, the lateſt Muſe's Toil,
Who brings the tardy Off'rings of her Lays,
The firſt in Duty, tho' the laſt in Praiſe.

Norwich, Dec. 9. The following is an Epigram on the late Rev. Dr. Camell, deceaſed.

Here the late Rev'rend Dr. Camell lies,
Whom envious Wretches ſtrive to ſtigmatize;
Lording with Infamy his very Duſt,
Who's now (we hope) triumphing with the Juſt,
Above the Reach of ſordid Pens and Tongues,
Joining with Angels in cœleſtial Songs.
Facetious was his Converſation here;
And ne'er was Friend more to his Friend ſincere:
Of our eſtabliſh'd Church a genuine Son,
Who dar'd her Diſcipline and Doctrine own:
His Knowledge, in myſterious Things, profound;
His Preaching pleaſing, orthodox, and ſound:
A ſweeter temper'd Perſon ne'er did live;
His Friends he would careſs, his Foes forgive.
His gen'rous Love and Charity to all
Make each good Man lament his early Fall.

FOREIGN NEWS.

A true Relation of what happened in the two Actions on the 21st and 23d of November 1732, between the Garrison of Oran, and the Turkish and Moorish Army that besieged it.

MArquiss Bay, Brigadier, arrived Post with all Diligence at Seville from Carthagena, in the Night of the 28th, as above, where he disembarqued from Oran, and went immediately to give an Account to his Majesty of the two Actions which happened on the 21st and 23d as above, in two Sallies the Garrison made on the Moors in the Manner following.

After the Turks and Moors had done the boldest and daring Things in the Attacks upon the Forts Santa Cruz and S. Philip; and having sprung five Mines under the Wall of the first, and had escaladed and given it divers Assaults, without being able to gain the least Advantage on that, or upon the neighbouring Fortifications, into which they threw themselves with barbarous Fury, in order to gain them (being resolved with incredible Valour to give all the Trouble to, and resist the King's Troops in all they could.) Notice was brought that the Moors were bringing down the Artillery of La Mezeta (an Eminence that commands the Castle of Santa Cruz, and even the Fortress of Oran) and that the said Artillery was conducting to the Attacks before S. Philip, whither likewise they were drawing that that was placed on the Batteries erected against it. That the Barbarians might not abandon this Siege unpunished, the Marquis of Santa Cruz, Lieutenant General and Commander in Chief, resolved to surprize and beat them before they should execute the Retreat they intended, and were disposing.

To this Intent, the Troops sent from Catalonia and Valencia were ordered to be landed; and notwithstanding that on the 21st at Break of Day, there remained on board the Men of War more than 2000 Men who could not till then be landed, on Account of the Roughness of the Weather, the General resolved to form his Troops between S Philip and S. Andrew, and from thence march to attack the Enemy's Trenches, detaching from the main Body the Marquis of Valde-Cannas, Brigadier, and Colonel of the Regiment of Foot of Victoria, and Don Michael Zaldua, Colonel of the Regiment of Cantabria, or Biskay, with their Bodies towards the Part of Fuente de Arriba, or Fountain of above; and the Marquis of Taye, Major-General, and Captain of the Grenadiers of the Walloon Guards, and with these, those of other Bodies, and the Regiment of Namur, and some Pioneers: The first, in order to make a Diversion in the Trenches on the left Wing of the Enemy that was there strongest, and the other to enter on the Right with their Detachment.

Of the rest of the Troops that composed the Salley, was formed a Square of six Battalions, and another in the Middle of the Reserve to support the Front, or Flank, as Necessity should require, with four Field Pieces; the Number of the whole Salley being 7,600 Foot, and 380 Horse and Dragoons.

The Enemy began to fire at the Body commanded by the Marquis Valde-Cannas; but as soon as they discovered that of Taye, they forsook the Trenches, and retired a Musket's Shot Distance from the detached Bodies, who then united.

The Square marched in this Form about three Quarters of a League from the Fortress, encouraging the Detachments; and in the Way four of the Enemies Cannon of 36 Pounders were taken.

The Enemy in a Wing (as is their Custom) fired, and retired, keeping their Distance from the Right, and rather leaning to our Left towards their Camp, in which Square we received a great Fire.

The Moorish Horse threw itself between ours and Fort S. Philip, in our Sight, to a great Number, but without any great Prejudice; for even seeing our Wounded dividing themselves towards that Part, they retired.

As this Attack had already lasted six Hours, the Troops made a Halt, because the Barbarians in great Numbers were spread on an Eminence or Height, from whence they commanded and galled our Flank, having before them a great Precipice, and our People receiving a continual Fire, which they made, tho' with considerable Damage to the Turks and Moors; the Marquis of Santa Cruz judged it useless and prejudicial to make any longer Stay in that Situation, and so commanded the Marquis de Taye to retire, which he did in good Order, and so formed in the Right. And that it might have been done with more Strength, the Regiment of Asturia's was detached from the Centre of the Square; and the Left of the same being that that suffered, or bore the Fire, Orders were given to this Corps to reinforce it, as accordingly it was going to do; but having by their Movement too much streightened their Formings, they got into Confusion, streightened their Formings, they got into Confusion, closing too much with one another, and the Retreat was made in Disorder, notwithstanding the Valour and Disdain with which they had withstood and resisted the continued Fire of the Barbarians.

The Marquis de Santa Cruz, with the Majors General, Don Bartolome Ladron, Don Philip Remirez, and other Officers, went Sword in Hand to stop and repair the Confusion; but not being able to do it with the necessary Celerity, the abovementioned remained in the Rear Guard. The Moors beholding this Disorder, drew nearer to make the most they could of the Occasion, with Sword in Hand, which made it necessary to pass over them, in order to form with the Army; in which unfortunate Occasion the Marquis of Santa Cruz was lost, the few Horse and Dragoons who accompany'd him, not being able to hinder his disastrous Death, to the universal Grief of those who had the Honour to be acquainted with the Valour and fine Qualities he was adorned with. The Horse and Dragoons that were in different Posts, went to the Assistance of the Rear, and restrained the Enemy, who at Sight suspended their Impetuosity.

At this Juncture the Troops that were landed from the Men of War, were marching to join the Army: They consisted of the first Battallion of Aragon, with their Col. Don Michael de Sada; six Companies with the rest of the Officers of the Regiment of Ulstonia, with their Col Don William Lacy, and other Detachments from other Corps, to the Number of above 2000 Men, and forming the Front to the Enemy, contributed with their Discharges, and very regular Disposition to the repairing the Order of the Troops, covering and making good their Retreat in such Manner, that immediately, and at a little Distance from the very Place where the Confusion and Disorder happened, they made and formed themselves, following the Valour and good Conduct of the Officers, both general and private, who strove with Emulation to remedy the above mentioned Misfortune to that Degree, that they were able to pursue their March in better Order, till they halted in the Trenches, which the Enemy had for three Hours and a Half been working at against Fort St. Philip, at which Time Fire was set to their Barracks, and a great Part of their Lines were destroyed; to which followed the Entry of the Army into the Town in the best Order, the Enemy having retired the Distance of a League and a Half from Oran.

For want of the Mules that were killed in the Action, all the Artillery was not brought along; one 36 Pounder Piece only was brought off, with a great Quantity of Ball, which were brought off in Cars, the rest were nailed.

As on the 21st, the Enemies Lines could not entirely be destroyed and levelled, the Commander in Chief, Don Bartholome Ladron, (who as eldest Major-General, succeeded the Marquis of Santa Cruz) disposed Things so, in order to conclude the Demolition, that another Sally should be made on the 23d, consisting of ten Companies of Grenadiers, and 500 Pioneers, commanded by the Count of Bearhaven, Colonel, who executed their Design, destroying and levelling entirely their Lines and Batteries, without the Enemies daring to oppose them; and concluding the same Day this Work, they returned to the Garrison.

This Action, tho' attended with the Misfortunes of losing the General, the Brigadier Marquis de Valde-Cannas, Col. Don Joseph Pinel, and 1500 Men killed and wounded, assures the Fortress entirely from any Idea that the Barbarians may be able to conquer it; and frees it from the Dread or Danger of a Siege, which with inexpressible Fury and Valour they had undertaken; and secures a Conquest that causes the Infidels so much Grief and Dread.
